Bottle bill effectiveness disputed

Out-of-state big business is currently pouring millions of dollars into the California campaign to defeat the bottle bill initiative, whereas bill proponents are depending upon grass-roots fund raising, small donations from individual contributors, and direct-mail appeals.

Proposition 11 is the mandatory nickel deposit on beer and soft drink beverage containers sold after March 1, 1984.

Current bottle bill legislation was born of humble beginnings. Twelve years ago the Plaid Pantry stores in Oregon began to pay customers a half-cent for every beer or soft drink container brought to them. Its president John Piacentini said the idea was to give incentives to clean up the litter around the Portland area. Three weeks later, over four million beverage containers had been cashed into Plaid Pantry stores, some as old as 20 years. The highways were clean with what had started as a gimmick.

Many believed it helped prompt Oregon legislature to adopt the first state law in the nation demanding a minimum deposit on beer and soft drink containers. Since then, eight other states have followed suit. Deposit laws have been voted down in a half dozen states in recent years, but by the time New York's recently enacted deposit law takes effect next July, a full one-fifth of the nation's populace will be covered by deposit law.

The $17 billion container industry last year produced 88.319 billion cans, 56.3 of these were for beer and soft drinks. Proposition 11 opponents contend that beer and soft drink containers represent only five to six percent of the nation's solid waste, according to an estimate by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

They further claim that Oregon has a higher per capita spending for highway clean-up than California, based on comparison on population.

Vice President of Coors, Rick Hawkins, said, "We (opponents) don't feel the added five cent deposit is going to make a difference in the amount of litter. The bill doesn't even cover what is purchased in vending machines, on trains, on planes or ships.

"Prop 11 will not clean up roadside litter, it will create sanitary problems for storage and handling, there will be a waste of resources such as water and gasoline and the prices of beverages will have to be increased," he said.

He said the majority of waste in the nation belongs to products made of paper and plastic. Hawkins said the people who initiated the bill had their hearts in a good place, but that it "won't work."

But according to the state's report in 1982, Oregon litter was reduced by 83 percent within the first two years the law was enacted. And despite inflation, since 1971, Oregon's litter pick-up costs have only increased an average of 1.8 percent a year. Dumps and landfills received 385,000 to 498,000 fewer beverage containers the first year of the bottle law--an estimated savings of $656,832 in waste disposal costs.

Those opposed to the bill say Oregon clean-up has resulted in a loss of jobs and higher prices for beverages, only to have litter still blowing in the wind. (Beer prices in Oregon are an estimated 50 cents higher than in California, and 38 cents higher for soft drinks, according to a letter printed in the Los Angeles Times.)

"Despite what proponents say, beer and soft drink prices in Oregon are higher, the state's 'holier-than-thou environmentalism' is reflected in the degree of high unemployment," (10.7 percent in July 1982), said Gilbert Moore, a spokesman for Californians for Sensible Laws. CSL is an amalgam of business and labor groups opposing deposit law.

Some feel the high unemployment for Oregon is partially due to a depressed labor industry.

Oregon beer prices in the 15 months following deposit law, can be attributed to the higher costs for materials and labor. An official of Coca-Cola said it would cost hundreds of millions of dollars to build or add new warehouses, change of production equipment, and add new trucks. This cost would ultimately be passed on to consumers.

Jeff Lewis, vice president and general manager of Foothill Beverage Company predicts the average California family of four will pay $100 a year more if Prop 11 passes.

Key allies of "No on 11" are the unions of AFL-CIO. The industries predict skilled jobs in the container-making industry will be lost if Prop 11 passes.

Supporters respond that some jobs will be lost initially, but more jobs are created through the return and recycling of containers. Opponents say these are usually low-paying jobs.

Frequently cited, for example of sanitary problems, is a 1980 Michigan state report that inspectors found "serious wide-spread cockroach and rodent problems in stores directly related to the return of beverage containers containing foreign matter."

Opponents commissioned a study by the Chapman College Center for Economic Research, which estimated an increase for Californians to exceed $319 million a year if the state required a deposit. Proponents issued a rival study done at University of California Irvine and concluded a deposit law would lead to little or no added costs to consumers.

Major proponent, Californians Against Waste, said the law would give local companies a competitive edge. The introduction of a one-way bottle enabled companies to distribute from large regional centers. A return to refillables could seemingly improve the competitive advantage for local companies.

"The litter aspect has to be the most emotional response to the individual," said Amy Hewes, field manager of CAW.

The governor of Oregon, Victor L. Atiyeh, said, "We have enjoyed a decade of success with what has become one of the most popular and effective pieces of legislation in the history of the state. The overall results have been overwhelmingly positive, and it appears that the passage of time does not diminish the favorable effects."

But the success of the initiative will remain dependent on the extent to which refillable bottles do or do not replace throw-away containers.

China to be talk subject

On Wednesday, Oct. 27 he will discuss "China After Mao" in Room 6304 at Cuesta College at 7:30 p.m.

Terrill, who is professor of government at Harvard University and research associate in the East Asian Studies Program there, will be at Cal Poly on Thursday, Oct. 28. His presentation at 11 a.m. in Room 220 of the Julian A. McPhee University Union, will be sponsored by the university's History Club.

Ross Terrill, PhD, among the most prominent authorities on contemporary China, will be speaking this week at Cuesta College and Cal Poly.

"Knives ready...Go!"

Those were the words shouted by Agriculture Council Rep. Blake Alexandre to start the pumpkin carving contest at the monthly meeting of the Cal Poly Los Lecheros Dairy Club held Thursday night. After 20 minutes of delicate carving, the defending champion freshman class of 1982 proved who was the best as their pumpkin "Gene" came away with First place.

The winning sophomore class will once again get to show their talent as they are invited to participate in the Crop Science pumpkin carving contest which will be held Thursday Oct. 28.

Wine tasting, auction benefits crisis centers

by RoseAnn Wentz
Managing Editor

Approximately 200 persons attended a wine tasting auction benefit for the San Luis Obispo County Rape Crisis Center and Women's Shelter Program at the Jack House Saturday.

Sponsored by First Bank of San Luis Obispo in conjunction with the SLO County District Attorney's office, the event heralded the first time in California "a DA's office has joined with private business to raise funds for two private businesses," according to Pete Dunan, Rape Crisis Center executive director and Women's Shelter Program administrator.

Dunan said money raised from the benefit will be used to provide direct services to victims of sexual assault and domestic violence. Both the Women's Shelter and Rape Crisis Center provide food, clothing, shelter, transportation, financial assistance and in some cases, counseling for victims, serving about 1,000 women in San Luis Obispo County each year, Dunan said.

The afternoon included sampling wine donated, poured and described by representatives of seven local wineries—San Martin, Lawrence, Santa Inez, HMR, Old Casteel Vineyards, Edna Valley and Tobias Vineyards. All the food was donated by various businesses, and prepared by Kristin Ball of Let Them Eat Cake.

The event was attended by many area notables, including Cal Poly accounting professor Roger Bishop, running for auditor in the Nov. 2 election.

"The event is very tasteful, well-attended," Bishop said when questioned by reporters. "Best of all, it's for a good cause."

Entertainment was provided by Warren Balfour and the Cuesta College Jazz Band for several hours, followed by a presentation of the Academy of Dance Jazz Dancers.

Wine from seven local wineries was auctioned off at a benefit for the San Luis Obispo County Rape Crisis Center and the Women's Shelter Program. The event, which brought in an estimated $2,800 with $1,300 still to be collected, was co-sponsored by the First Bank of San Luis Obispo and the District Attorney's office.

Representatives from local wineries poured and described their wines to people attending an auction benefit held Saturday. Entertainment and food were also provided by local businesses and bands to add to the afternoon event.

Canadian Clansmen Fall 34-0 to America's team

by Dave Wilcox
Staff Writer

In a world of rising international tensions, Saturday night's across-the-border skirmish at Mustang Stadium provided few nail-biting moments as the Cal Poly Mustangs used big plays to trounce Canada's Simon Fraser University, 34-0.

America's Team (well, at least Saturday night they were) shot down the Clansmen's air attack with five interceptions and Tim Snodgrass passed, though not with flying colors, his test as starting quarterback, as the Mustangs cruised after racing to a 21-0 lead at intermission.

Snodgrass completed eight of 17 passes for 167 yards and one interception and became the third Mustang starting signal-caller this season. Asked if Snodgrass would be the starter against Western Conference foe Santa Clara next week, head coach Jim Sanderson said although he hadn't talked to offensive coordinator Dave Grosz, he expected he would.

"It's not fair to expect a perfect game from him," said Sanderson, responding to a question about Snodgrass' performance Saturday night.

Grosz, questioned about the possibility that Snodgrass would be tabbed as next week's starter, replied after a long pause, "probably."

It was Snodgrass' opposing number, though, Jay Prepchuck of the Clansmen, who might be worried about keeping his job after completing just 18 of 33 passes (not counting completions to members of the Mustang secondary) for only 125 yards.

Mustang inside linebacker Steve Booker led the pick-off parade, stepping in front of two Prepchuck throws and returning one 63 yards for a touchdown, giving the Mustangs a 14-0 lead.

Shortly after Booker's return — in fact on the next Clansmen punt — Keenan Stanley put any notion of a Clansmen comeback to rest by recovering his own fumble and sprinting 52 yards for the score making it 21-0, Mustangs.

Images of a blowout weren't so clear at the outset as SFU took the ball on their first possession and marched to the Poly 23 yardline, aided by a defensive holding call on the Mustangs. But a holding penalty of their own moved the Clansmen back 10 yards and severed their drive. Kicker Brad Williams entered the game to attempt a 35 yard field goal but was wide right. Simon Fraser never came close to scoring the remainder of the game.

After trading punts, Poly took over on their own 46 and on second and 10, Snodgrass threw a bomb that might have been a little damp when Clarence Martin grabbed it for a first down at the Clansmen 15. Brian Gutierrez, who was the first Mustang running back to gain 100 yards on the ground in one game last week, broke through a gaping hole on the next play to put the Mustangs on the board. Gutierrez shattered the century mark against the Clansmen, scooting for 115 yards on 18 carries.

Just before intermission Prepchuck tried to crank up the Clansmen's two-minute offense to get them back in the game. He could only manage to throw two interceptions, though, one to Sherman Turntine at Poly's one yardline, while junior Gene Underwood picked off a desperation pass on the final play of the half.

While the question of who was going to win was all but resolved, the 3,947 fans lounging in Mustang stadium were still cheering in the second half, though a lot of the time it was directed not at the players, but to the antics of the Poly marching band.

The Mustangs, who wound up with 319 yards in total offense to 190 for the Clansmen, nonchalantly increased their lead with two field goals in the third quarter. Rick Brenneman connected from 22 yards out to make it 24-0. Then, freshman kicking phenom David Croteau, who had tied the school record three weeks earlier with a 52-yard field goal against Portland State, boomed a 56-yarder that cleared the crossbar about five yards. It was even tipped at the line by a Clansmen player.

The Mustangs put their final point on the board in the last quarter as Snodgrass hit Damone Johnson, standing by himself in the corner of the end zone, for a 4-yard scoring strike.

Rick Brenneman, who handles short field goals for the Mustangs, connects on a 22-yarder against Simon Fraser. Later, Mustang David Croteau broke the school record with a 56-yard boot.

I DON'T WANNA SHAWN TURNER

It would be nice to have a name like Dave Kohl. That name belongs to the sports editor of the Santa Barbara News-Press. So when he has a column of general interest, he begins it with, "A serving of Kohlcuts." Lucky guy, Dave.

I can't do that. Turner is a hard name to be clever with. I tried and concluded, hey, the creative process only goes so far. So my column of general interest begins with stark dullness.

The first subject is injury. Because I've got one.

Right, by jogging.

I don't know how I got it. Maybe I stepped wrong. Whatever, it's given me a beauty of a limp.

Injuries, you know, are humiliating. They take the spirit right out of you. Pride invariably takes over, and you try and cover up the limp, but all you look like is someone trying to cover up a limp. Add the grimaces, and you look like Quasimodo.

What I really hate about injuries is explaining them. A confrontation like this would be nice:

Concerned acquaintance: "What happened to you?"

Me: "What? Oh, this? It's nothing, really. I saw someone trip and fall in the crosswalk on Monterey Street, right in front of a car. I sort of scooped her up and kind of saved her life. All I did was take the impact of the car."

Acquaintance: "Gosh," or some other Ozzie and Harriet exclamation.

But it's never that way. It's always, "Well, it's the funniest thing. I was carrying a glass of milk from the kitchen into the living room. My roommate was eating peanuts and, well, I hit one of the empty shells. The doctor says no running around for me."

The concerned acquaintance, meanwhile, has taken interest in the patterns on the asbestos ceiling.

I'm convinced injuries are what kept me from eventual All-America honors and the easy step into corporate sports and Mercedes-Benz convertibles. I had an operation four years ago on a more serious injury to my knee — want to see the scars? They're still nice and red and ugly. The knee is strong as steel now. It's everything around it that's falling apart.

The irony of it all is I jog like everyone else to get in shape. Now I'm in worse shape than when I started. I'm safer behind this desk.

***

Someone asked me last week, "Don't you like being sports editor?" She had gathered from this column that my life is miserable.

How easily they are fooled. I'm having fun. The reason why I put myself up to be the Woody Allen of sports is:

a) By implying that I'm sub-human and entirely capable of making mistakes, you take pity on me and like the sports page even more (Which is not hard. Have you seen the great writing on this page? Not me, silly, the rest of the bunch.)

b) I really am sub-human and entirely capable of making mistakes, but I still have fun.

c) I can make mistakes and be excused for it. I'm only in this for the money.

Pick b.

Volleyballers win in rocky weekend

There's a tiger (lily) in that tank

by Mike Mathison
Staff Writer

When the Cal Poly women's volleyball team traveled to Los Angeles last year and played the USC Trojans, the Mustangs' play went into the tank after two-and-a-half games.

After winning the first two games in 1981, 15-12, 16-14 and led 13-8 in game three, an upset was in the making. But it never happened. Poly's gas tank went empty, and the reserve switch wasn't working. The Mustangs did fill the tank back up, though, with themselves.

USC came back for a 15-13 win in game three. The Trojans completed the comeback with easy wins in games four and five, 15-7, 15-6. In 1982, though, this didn't happen, although the scenario was set for it.

The Mustangs knocked USC off its Trojan horse in games one and two, 15-7, 15-13 Friday night in front of some 450 spectators in USC's crackerbox gym which resembled Carver High's place in the television show "The White Shadow." But they weren't all USC fans as about 50 Mustang rooters were also in attendance. And they made just as much noise as the "other" 400.

Poly jumped on top 11-3 in game three and had the host Trojans in deep trouble. But USC started its comeback. The Trojans closed the gap to 12-8. It was shades of 1981. Instead of the Mustangs going into the tank this year, they kept USC in the holding tank long enough to preserve a healthy 15-7, 15-13, 15-8 victory. The match took just 62 minutes.

It was the third battle between the two schools this year. Poly has won two of them. The Mustangs entered the match the No. 6 ranked team in the country. USC was No. 5. That'll change. The loss dropped USC to 12-5. The Trojans are 4-3 in Western Collegiate Athletic Association (WCAA) activity. So their only two non-league losses have come via Cal Poly.

"They (the Trojans) are a fine, quality team" head coach Mike Wilton said. "But obviously, so are we. It was an excellent win for us. I was very pleased with our play. We had excellent practices all week. And we made the right mental preparations for the match. I told the team the outcome would be decided before the match started. I didn't play a lot of girls but I didn't have to. The girls out there were doing the job. Everybody had their moments."

It was a different story versus Cal State Fullerton Saturday night. As a team, the Mustangs were in the tank. They had a 14-7 lead in game one, but had to fight and scratch their way to a 17-15 win. Poly was down 15-14, but scored three straight off a Sandy Aughinbaugh kill, a Fullerton error and a Wendy Hooper kill. The Mustangs escaped from the tank just long enough for the win.

After a 15-9 win in game two, it appeared Poly was completely out of the tank and well on its way to leaving Cal State Disneyland early, but no. After building a 11-3 lead in game three, Wilton's crew went back in the tank. The Titans came back for a 15-13 win. In that game, the Mustangs had nine kills in 27 attempts, with seven errors. Not one of their better performances.

In game four, Fullerton was kind enough to allow Poly back out of the tank to secure a 15-10 victory. The 17-15, 15-9, 13-15, 15-10 win over the now 6-12 Titans gave the Mustangs an 18-4 record. Their next encounter will be Thursday night at 7:30 when the university of Santa Clara rolls into the Main Gymnasium.

"I still have a sour taste in my mouth about last night (against Fullerton)," Wilton said. "The girls were still on cloud nine from Friday's win. They were still pleased with themselves. I'm not saying they shouldn't have been pleased with themselves, but they were not ready to be about the task of getting after them. Fullerton played well. But we should be beating that team like 15-5."

"My intentions were to play everyone in the context of a nice three-straight win. I played everybody, but it was out of desperation trying to find the right combination on the court. I was bitterly disappointed last night (Saturday). It always disturbs me when my team doesn't make a good show of themselves. Using a bullfighting term, I would have desired a 'clean kill.' I imagine Fullerton walked out of the gym feeling really good and we didn't."

Hooper, a senior middle blocker, led the Mustangs in hitting versus the Trojans. She had 16 kills in 32 chances. Junior hitter Aughinbaugh was 14-for-28, while sophomore Terri Purling was five-for-18. She also had three service aces. Hooper had three solo blocks and three block assists. Aughinbaugh had two solos and three assists.

Against Fullerton, Hooper was 21-for-45 with three solos and two assists. Aughinbaugh was 17-for-41 with five defensive saves. Purling was nine-for-17 with three block assists and three defensive saves. Senior Jolene Huffman came off the bench to play well. She was six-for-13, had four service aces and three defensive saves.

The Mustangs now have a lot of practice time in front of them. After facing Santa Clara Thursday night, they have the weekend off before hosting No. 2 ranked (as of Oct. 24) University of Hawaii on Wednesday night Nov. 3 at 7:30 in the main gym.

"We'll be doing a lot of fundamental work," Wilton said. "We'll be doing some back-tracking, refresher-type of stuff. It was a real great accomplishment by the girls to having beaten USC twice this year. Overall, I'm very pleased with the way the girls have played this year."

The fitting end to the weekend trip came at about 2:00 Sunday morning. Right before the Avila Road turn-off going north on Highway 101, one of the vans ran out of gas.

The tank was empty. Mike Wilton, for one, will now make sure the tank is filled before making a return trip home. Filled with gas, that is. Not with his girls.

ASI announcements

In addition to taking action on the controversial draft resolution supporting Ben Sasway (resolution failed by a vote of 3-7-6), this month the CSSA nominated Linnea Mullins (Sonoma State), and Mark Branfman (Sonoma State), and Matt Adams (Cal State Long Beach) for the position of Student Trustee. Governor Brown will make the final appointment later this year. The Board of Trustees establishes system-wide policies for the California State Universities.

We also received some good news from the Chancellor's Office for a change. Lew Messner of the Budget and Planning Office reported that the student service fee (currently $72/quarter) will be reduced by $2/quarter to $70. The reduction is the result of a projected over-income for the current year which will be returned to the students through lowered fees in 1983-84.

Dr. Cleary, the President of CSU Northridge, also addressed the CSSA Board of Directors at the October meeting. He announced that there is a growing sentiment expressed by many university administrators to link a tuition to CSU program funding items. The proposal is an attempt to keep more of the student fee money "in the system", so that students will get some benefit out of the increased fees. However, there is a concern that the state will impose the tuition and still not increase its program funding. Nonetheless, Dr. Cleary is hoping to receive student support for the proposal.

Locally, the Student Senate will approve the revised "Articles of Incorporation" for the ASI. The revisions are designed primarily to bring our Articles into conformity with state non-profit corporation law.

The Senate will also vote on a "Student Organizational Housing" resolution, sponsored by Bob Woolery (Engineering & Technology) and co-written by External Affairs Assistant, Bill Doyle. The resolution supports the concept of allowing the individual campuses to decide whether or not they desire student organizational housing on their campus. A number of Greek houses have expressed an interest in having their houses on campus.

The CSSA, at its last meeting, encouraged the Board of Trustees to vote on the student organizational housing issue at its November meeting while the current Student Trustee is on the Board. At present, the Board has the item on its agenda for the January meeting.

ASI Vice President

Intramurals information

The Recreational Sports program, located in the University Union Room 104, offers a variety of physical sports programs as well as leisure activities. Upcoming events include the Pre-Holiday Basketball Tournament. This all-campus, five-player single elimination tournament will begin Thursday, Oct. 28 and run through the last week of Fall quarter. Entries will be taken on Oct. 25 at 6 p.m. in Room 202 of Science North. There will be an officials meeting immediately following. There is a $3 team entry fee.

Don't miss the Wheelchair Basketball game Tuesday, Oct. 26 in the Main Gym between the "Creaking Wheels" and "SLO Motion Riders." Come and watch the Cal Poly administrators battle it in the court with the SLO Wheelchair Team. This benefit will take place in coordination with the Disabled Awareness Day. A 50 cent donation will be requested at the door. The cost will benefit the ASI Disabled Students

Unlimited Scholarship Fund.

Coming soon - "The Annual Turkey Trot"...Nov. 18. Run to win your free turkey! There will also be a separate wheelchair participation for Disabled Students to win a Thanksgiving turkey.

Each week the Campus Recreational Sports program would like to recognize outstanding sports officials. John Mason and Dave Chamberlain have been chosen as outstanding in softball; Gerry Atkins in football; Bill Durfee in soccer. A super job by super officials!

Congratulations to "Awesome" on winning the first annual "World Series Softball Tournament." Awesome holds a 10-game winning streak and two championships under their belt.

Don't forget the new recreational Information Hotline, 546-1447, for all the daily and upcoming activities and facility availability. For more information, call the Recreational Sports office at 546-1366 or stop by the office in UU, Room 104.

Yes on '11'

Editor:

The free-spending opponents of recycling and litter clean-up are spreading a lot of misinformation and clever half-truths about Proposition 11. I'd like to speak to some of the subjects they've harped on throughout the campaign. Prices - prices have stayed the same or gone down for soft drinks in all of the other 'bottle bill' states. Beer prices have dropped or stayed the same in five of the six 'bottle bill' states. Of course prices have gone up nationwide from inflation, a factor unrelated to deposit laws.

Recycling - This proposition mandates recycling.

Recycling of beverage containers is over 90 percent in 'bottle bill' states. Prop 11 can only help recycling.

Fund raising - Prop 11 is a boon to charities and persons on limited incomes who collect discarded containers. Now bottles that are currently worthless and aluminum cans now worth less than a penny will be worth a nickel, a minimum increase in value of 500 percent.

Sanitation - there have been no outbreaks of disease or plagues of insects in any of the present bottle bill states because of empty containers.

Taxes - Prop 11 is not a tax and does not create any new taxes or bureaucracies. In fact it will reduce tax expenditures for beach, park, and road cleanup.

Energy and water - Prop 11 will conserve these valuable resources. The opposition's claims to the contrary are based on studies that only look at small parts of the picture instead of the whole production system from mining to consumer purchase.

Jobs - Prop 11 will create a net increase in jobs. I would like to urge everyone to study this issue thoroughly and not give in to the seduction of television advertising.

Be yourself

Editor:

After reading today's article about gays (Oct. 18), I was prompted to write. I am not gay, but I do believe in an individual's rights. I do not care to see gays affectionate in public, but that shouldn't mean anything to those who wish to be affectionate. Matt and friend should do what they want and ignore those who ridicule them. Why worry about what people say? Matt, do whatever you feel like, as long as it's not hurting anyone else.

Suzanne Spencer

Think of impact

Editor:

Recruiters come daily to interview students for jobs with the nuclear weapons industry. The decision to join a particular company is difficult. It is often based upon immediate financial reward. When one is working on weapons systems that are capable of destroying the world, ethical questions must be considered.

Potential employees must not divorce themselves from what they are creating and its impact upon the world. The technological advances in nuclear weaponry is apparent in the increasingly accurate first-strike weapons. As the U.S. moves closer to a first-strike capability, the Soviets will be forced to put their weapons systems on hairtrigger alert (launch on warning). First strike weapons such as the MX, Pershing II, Cruise and Trident II Missiles are produced by corporations that recruit regularly at Cal Poly.

As individuals, we alone may not be able to stop the arms race, but we can prevent ourselves from becoming dependent on it. Remember, a nuclear war can ruin your whole career.

Remember to vote

Editor:

The November election is rapidly approaching. In recent issues of the Daily, many people have written their wonderful ideals of what it means to be an American. Voting is the only way that these wonderful ideals are going to be met. Local and federal representation is to be decided, as are some very strong statements concerning the environment and our relationship to it. Those of us in the Ecology Action Club love this global paradise on which we reside and we urge those that feel the same to take time now and become familiar with the issues and the candidates so that our ballots represent educated decisions and not corporate or media propaganda. We love you.
